About Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids (CTFK)

The Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids (CTFK) is a leading advocacy organization working to reduce tobacco use and its deadly toll around the world. The Campaign works to save lives by advocating for public policies that prevent kids from smoking, help smokers quit, and protect everyone from secondhand smoke. A global non-governmental organization based in Washington, D.C., the Campaign promotes public policies that have been proven to reduce tobacco use and exposure to secondhand smoke, including higher tobacco taxes, comprehensive smoke-free laws, strict bans on tobacco advertising, promotion and sponsorship, and graphic warning labels on tobacco products.

Internationally, the Campaign supports governments and non-governmental organizations in promoting and implementing these policies in low-and middle-income countries where more than 80 percent of tobacco-related deaths will occur in the coming decades. The Campaign is one of five partner organizations to coordinate activities under the Bloomberg Initiative to Reduce Tobacco Use, working with governments and non-governmental organizations to implement effective measures to reduce tobacco use. CTFK has active initiatives in low-and middle-income countries around the world where the highest rates of tobacco use are found, including in Indonesia.
